EMERGENCY MEDICAL CARE OF INMATES BY OCSD IN HOLDING CELL FACILITIES

1. Summary
The day-to-day business of county-operated, adult detention facilities in Orange County, under the management of the Orange County Sheriff’s Department (OCSD), requires multiple programs to provide reasonable inmate care.

An area reviewed by the Grand Jury was the OCSD’s care of inmates in Superior Court Justice Center holding cell facilities as related to reasonableness and timeliness of responses in emergency medical situations. Based on our review, the 2005-2006 Orange County Grand Jury concluded that responses to emergency medical needs were timely and reasonable.

2. Introduction and Purpose of the Study
The OCSD is responsible to ensure inmates are transported safely and in a timely manner Monday through Friday from the jail sites to all Justice Center holding cell facilities in order to make court appearances.

Deputy sheriffs are responsible for the care and safety of the inmates while being transported to and from the jails and courthouses and also while housed in the holding cell facilities awaiting court appearances.

This study reviewed the timeliness and reasonableness of emergency medical care response to inmates maintained in holding cell facilities.

3. Method of Study
In regard to Justice Center holding cell facilities, the Grand Jury:

- Examined policy and procedure manuals
- Analyzed inmate Medical Aid Reports
- Interviewed OCSD personnel responsible for emergency medical care

• Walked through the facilities, observing conditions and equipment associated with emergency medical care

To provide comparison with emergency medical care provided within the jails, the Grand Jury also reviewed the Central Jail Complex facility in Santa Ana. The Grand Jury:

• Interviewed Institutional Medical Services (IMS) personnel responsible for medical care
• Walked through the facilities, including the Inmate Infirmary, observing conditions and equipment associated with medical care

4. Background

4.1 Jail Sites

There are three jail locations, but five separate facilities in the Orange County detention facilities system. The Men’s Jail, the Women’s Jail and the Intake and Release Center are housed in the Central Jail Complex in Santa Ana. The James A. Musick facility is at the edge of Irvine near the former El Toro Marine Corps Air Station. Theo Lacy Jail is across the street from the Block of Orange. The OCSD also operates two holding cell facilities in the contract cities of San Clemente and Laguna Niguel.

4.2 Institutional Medical Services (IMS)

IMS is the Health Care Agency organization that works within the county jails. IMS staff is responsible for medical, dental, nursing, pharmaceutical and behavioral services for all inmates in the county’s adult detention facilities.

IMS staff includes:

• Physicians (MDs)/Nurse Practitioners (NPs)
• Dentists
• Registered Nurses (RNs)/Licensed Vocational Nurses (LVNs)
• Pharmacists

4.3 Justice Center Holding Cell Facilities

The OCSD oversees the transporting of inmates as they leave the adult jail facilities before dawn and fan out to the five Superior Court Justice Centers throughout Orange County. They are transported in secured buses and vans to the various courthouses and then into holding cell facilities while waiting to appear before a judge. It is an intricate process to get all the inmates to the right courthouses at the right times. This job of transporting the inmates repeats itself again in the early evening as the inmates return to the jails.

During this entire process, from leaving until returning to their assigned jail, total care of the inmate populations, including any emergency medical care, is the responsibility of deputy sheriffs.
5. Observations and Discussion

5.1 Number of Holding cell facilities Inmates

As these numbers indicate, more than 500 inmates are transported every week day for court appearances at the Justice Centers.

5.2 Justice Centers

Because holding facility characteristics vary by location, the Grand Jury selected the Central Justice Center in Santa Ana as an unique example. At this Justice Center, inmates seldom are seen outside of a courtroom because they are brought there via a labyrinth of sub-basements, tunnels, elevators, and holding cell facilities in the interior of the high-rise courthouse. There are holding cell facilities on several floors near courtrooms.

5.2.1 Care of Inmates

Individuals taken into custody by the court or law enforcement all receive a medical evaluation when they are booked in the jails. Inmates sent to holding cell facilities from the jails have been medically cleared and appropriate medications, if necessary, sent with them. The deputy sheriffs interact with IMS to check inmate medical history should the need arise as a result of an emergency.

Deputy sheriffs serve as the first line of care in medical emergencies within the holding cell facility, during vehicular transportation, and in courtroom settings. During our visits, the Grand Jury was told of some heroic, life-saving actions by some of the deputies reacting to unforeseen medical emergencies with inmates in their care.

The deputies are trained in First Aid, Coronary Pulmonary Resuscitation, use of an Automatic Electronic Defibrillator, and other life-saving procedures. It is an important part of their training to be ready to respond to medical emergencies.

If deputy sheriffs make the determination that the required medical need/care is beyond the scope of their training/ability, deputies dial “911” to call paramedics.
from outside the courthouse to render advanced medical care and/or transport to an emergency room facility if required.

5.2.2 Emergency Response Times

The Grand Jury study reviewed the emergency care procedures and Medical Aid Reports for inmates in for years 2004 and 2005. The numbers of reports reviewed for each Center were:

<thead>
<tr>

Based on the Reports provided, the Grand Jury concluded deputy sheriffs responded reasonably to medical emergencies. Given that timeliness is critical in responding to emergency medical needs, the Grand Jury also concluded that the deputies’ response times were reasonable.

The Grand Jury study also reviewed the Emergency Medical System’s (EMS) records of response time to “911” calls from holding cell facilities for 2004 and 2005. The Grand Jury found these response times were also reasonable.
